In that sublime scene nature herself proclaimed the respect due to science and virtue. The accomplished scholar, the splendid philosopher, the unsullied statesman, whose name could shake a throne, whose eye gazed unmoved on mitres and sceptres and diadems, and whose giant reason stalked like a conqueror among the proudest of Europe's peers, the representatives of wealth, lineage and royalty, when brought before the representatives of the Letters of his country, this sovereign of genius and learning, a captive in the chains of his own emotions, remained as mute as the walls that surrounded him - a type of the homage of man to that intellectual light whose source is above the stars, and a monument of the glory of Literature only eclipsed by the silent affection of the apostle of liberty and truth. And who can stand here, amid these classic altars, around these shrines of memory, beneath these familiar shades, in this venerable Hall, on this ever-honored Anniversary, before this brilliant circle of youthful hope and the assembled intelligence of the State, adorned and graced by that lovely presence which speaks to our hearts of all that is good, beautiful, pure and holy - and not feel overpowered by...
