Public Education Uncensored is a collection of public school vignettes. Employment in a public school is entertaining and shocking. Stories present themselves without solicitation. The chapters and stories are organized in a way that best simulates a day of teaching public school. Twenty-five years of teaching kids inspired this collection. Taking roll, yard duty supervision and coaching are parts of the job. Faculty meetings and detention experiences are included. My job interviews were unorthodox. A principal got me. I doubt I'll retire before I'm seventy. It's a blessing to enjoy one's job. My wife teaches down the hall. Human and creature identities are concealed. The exceptions being: Mrs. McIntire, Mrs. Allen, Mark, Carl, my wife Teresa and Bud the Dog. Teaching is my penance and profession. I have a master key to my middle school alma mater, and my old 7th grade homeroom class! Stranger things happen in public school. The fickle finger of fate prophetically waggled my career path in 1976. My middle school report cards read: Talks to much in class! Things haven't changed much. Public...
